

The Six Inch Gallery Opening

Online and at Currents: Santa Fe International New Media Festival

Worldwide – May 19, 2015: The Six Inch Gallery exhibits art on the walls of a hand drawn online exhibition space. The new exhibition, Sleeptime... Dreams and Nightmares, features painting and photography expressing visual metaphors of the subconscious. The opening will be held on June 12, 2015 worldwide at SixInchGallery.com and concurrently will be displayed at Currents: Santa Fe International New Media Festival located at El Museo Cultural de Santa Fe.

The show features:

- John Henry Fuseli's The Nightmare, Fuseli's best known work
- Henri Rousseau's beautifully executed dream paintings
- Utagawa Kuniyoshi's depictions of mythical scenes
- Francisco Goya 's terrifying and allegorical images
- Hieronymus Bosch's mental and spiritual torments
- Ben Mittleman's mysterious photographs

The gallery conceived and drawn by Orlando Leibovitz is a collaborative artwork. Orlando draws the architectural space and the figures that appear in the gallery on six inch square paper. The architectural drawings are then scanned and each artists' work are digitally hung on the walls. The Currents Festival will display the gallery on an iPad.

The gallery also permanently exhibits Orlando Leibovitz's Visual Diaries from 2012 and 2014. In 2012, Orlando created a visual diary image for each day of the year. In these six inch collage/drawings, Orlando recorded his daily perceptions and emotions, documenting his unfolding inner life and his artistic and spiritual journey.

The Six Inch Gallery is devoted to showcasing a variety of art. The gallery aspires to engage a broad and diverse worldwide audience and to create a place for exploration, stimulation and discussion about art. Each show becomes part of the permanent collection offering a continuously growing online gallery experience.

Please join us at Currents or online for the SixInchGallery.com featuring Sleeptime... Dreams and Nightmares. This unique gallery changes the ways in which we view art on the web. The opening will be held on June 12, 2015 worldwide at SixInchGallery.com and concurrently will be displayed at Currents: Santa Fe International New Media Festival located at El Museo de Cultural Santa Fe.
